When it comes to planning your honeymoon, start early, work with professionals and plan a trip you BOTH will enjoy.

How soon should we start planning?

As soon as possible! Many honeymoon destinations book quickly so the sooner you plan, the more likely you will be to get the honeymoon you desire. You will also have more time to budget.

Should we work with a Travel Agency?

Seeking out the expert advice of a travel consultant can save you time and money. Through incomparable experience and valuable resources, travel consultants specialize in providing personalized suggestions to suit your interests and your budget.

Where should we go?

First, decide how long you can be away. Choosing a destination in an exotic location may require more than a week since much of the time may be spent traveling to and from the location.

Decide what you have in mind for an agenda. Are you looking for a time of relaxation, adventure, site seeing, cultural, etc.?

What about an all-inclusive resort?

All-inclusive resorts are very popular for honeymoons and may offer exactly what will meet your needs. Many have on-site wedding consultants that can arrange for a destination wedding. The Caribbean and Mexico offer an array of these resorts offering many options for honeymoon packages.

Is cruising a good option?

Absolutely! You can visit multiple destinations and unpack only once. The ship becomes your home away from home. All meals onboard are provided as well as entertainment.

Will we need special documentation?

Depending on the destination, you may be required to have a passport. Some countries may also require a visa. You should apply for these documents well in advance of your trip.

Should we purchase travel insurance?

Accidents, flight cancellations, baggage loss, illness, tour cancellations, theft, civil unrest or emergency evacuation can occasionally interrupt travel plans. Your honeymoon is an investment and travel insurance provides peace of mind should unforeseen circumstances arise.
